today in the injuries I must soothe, and arguments that I must moderate.
There will be injuries I must soothe, and arguments that I must moderate.
There will be something broken that I must fix, and something lost that I must find.
There will be frequent hunger pangs that I must satisfy, and thirst that I must guench.
There will be spills that I must clean up, bottoms that I must wipe, accidents that I must change, and illnesses that I must treat.
Today there will be offenses I must forgive, forgetfulness I must overlook, and hundreds of questions that I must answer.
There will be boundaries that only/can uphold and schedules that only / care to keep.
There will be disorder that I must pulltogether, dismay that I must comfort, and disrespect that I must address.
Today people will yell for help, demanding my presence. I must run to the rescue.

Sometimes, I'll discover a legitimate emergency, but most of the time, it will be the smallest complaint that will melt with a kiss.

today there will be someone to carry, someone to dress, someone to help up, and someone to hold up.

There will be someone to teach, someone to inspire, and someone to appreciate.

today there will be someone asleep whom I must wake up, and someone awake, whom I must help sleep.

There will be injustices I must make right, meanness I must restrain, kindness

I must encourage, memories I must treasure, and goodness I must celebrate.

today there will be wrongs to confess, sinners to love, a Savior to worship, and grace to receive.

today my work as a mother strangely and beautifully resembles God's work as our Heavenly Father.

today my occupation is His occupation; my service, His own.

And today, if this is all I accomplish, I must fall asleep feeling quite satisfied indeed.

today I can do these anticipated tasks with joy and gratitude, because God Himself wakes me up in the morning, feeds me with the Living Bread, gives me good work to do, soothes my weary heart, and runs to my rescue whenever I call for help.

www.LauraBooz.com